ANNUAL REPORT 2014

MESSAGE FROM
THE CHAIRMAN AND CO-FOUNDER

Now in its thirteenth year, PSSI is continuing to strengthen and refine its core programs and activities. As the Institute is more “boutique” in size, we choose to be highly selective concerning the security-related issue areas we seek to cover.

Accordingly, we have concentrated our efforts over the past year on: enriching our traditional Security Scholars Program (which includes PSSI’s co-sponsored Master’s Degree Program at Charles University in International Security Studies and our NATO Summer School); expanding our long-time Energy Security Program (particularly with regard to Central and Eastern Europe and the operations of key Russian state-owned energy enterprises); deepening our Space Security Program (initiated in 2010) which is underpinned by our Biennial Space Security Conference Series involving leading space policy experts from Europe, the U.S. and Japan as well as a new Charles University graduate course introduced by PSSI entitled “Space Security in the 21st Century”; introducing a new Economic and Financial (E&F) Statecraft Program that focuses on sanctions policy, the E&F threat domain and the global soft-power projection activities and transactions of Russian and Chinese state-owned enterprises; and structuring a Special Projects Program, led by Jiří Schneider, former Czech First Deputy Foreign Minister, which is presently focusing on security sector reform in Ukraine and the growing cyber security threat.

We are especially pleased by the initial successes of our new International Relations and Security Affairs Resource Hub (IRSEC Hub), which is an online information platform designed to foster intellectual exchanges and closer coordination among like-minded think tanks in the four Visegrad countries of Poland, Hungary, Slovakia and the Czech Republic. This new interactive Hub, which includes an E-Learning component, has already attracted some 27 partner organizations.

Finally, PSSI’s regional stature continues to rise as indicated by its 7th ranking in Central and Eastern Europe and Russia by the University of Pennsylvania’s prestigious 2014 “Go-To Think Tank Index” surveying some 6,500 think tanks worldwide. The Institute was also in the top 1% of global think tanks in the categories of “Think Tanks to Watch” and “Best Managed Think Tanks”. It was ranked the 76th most influential public policy group in the category of the world’s “Top Foreign Policy and International Affairs Think Tanks”.

As in the past, these educational and security policy achievements would not have been possible without the generous support of PSSI’s institutional and individual donors to whom we are immensely grateful.

SECURITY SCHOLARS PROGRAM

ROBINSON-MARTIN SECURITY SCHOLARS PROGRAM

PSSI launched its Robinson-Martin Security Scholars Program (RMSSP) in February of 2002. RMSSP offers some seventeen highly qualified and motivated students from leading Czech universities the opportunity to participate in a two-semester program on the premises of PSSI covering a broad spectrum of security-related subjects. PSSI evaluated other established European and American security studies programs to help guide the development of the Institute's RMSSP. It specializes in putting visiting security policy luminaries together with our students in small group settings, followed whenever possible by a relaxed social gathering that permits them to interact with visiting lecturers on a more personal basis.

As noted, the Robinson-Martin Security Scholars Program is presently comprised of a series of lectures and seminars led by distinguished current and former senior security policy professionals from the Czech Republic and number of other countries, including the U.S. The content and sequencing of over twenty lectures each academic year were originally designed by the PSSI's late Executive Director and Co-Founder, Oldřich Černý. Mr. Černý himself was a veteran of the Czech security community, serving as former President Václav Havel's National Security Advisor and Director of the Czech Foreign Intelligence Service for almost a decade.

In addition to the lecture series, students are required to write a policy paper on one of the topics covered and be involved in numerous Institute activities, including conferences and roundtables. Among the distinguished RMSSP lecturers in 2014 were: Ondřej Horváth, Médecins Sans Frontières; Jan Urban, Czech journalist and lecturer, at NYU; Karel Randák, former Director of Czech Intelligence; Jan Schneider, Security Analyst; Petr Pučík, Security Analyst; Andor Šándor, former Chief of Military Intelligence; Jiří Šedivý, former Chief of Staff of Czech Armed Forces; or Ondřej Soukup, journalist and expert on Russia and Ukraine.

COOPERATION WITH CHARLES UNIVERSITY

Since its inception in 2002, PSSI has been closely collaborating with the prestigious Charles University in Prague. In 2006, PSSI began to structure and financially support a new Master's Degree Program in Security Studies, the first of its kind in the Czech Republic. PSSI also helped pursue and receive English language accreditation of our Masters Degree program from the Ministry of Education which was rolled out in the Fall of 2012. The program offers an interesting range of cutting-edge subjects in the field of security studies and provides students with solid theoretical training as well as a detailed understanding of some of the crucial security challenges of our time (e.g. energy security, space security, Russia and regional conflicts, terrorism, proliferation, etc.).

PSSI continues to coordinate closely with Charles University by organizing lectures by visiting speakers and hosting workshops. In this connection, PSSI's James Q. Whitaker Security Lecture Series was established at the Faculty of Social Sciences, Charles University in 2008 to further such cooperation. The primary aim of these lectures is to bring distinguished guest lecturers from the global security and foreign policy communities and academia to share their analyses, expertise and first-hand experiences with the students.

Among the more recent lecturers and topics have been: Professor Robert Jervis from the Columbia University on "Perception and Misperception in International Politics;" Professor Otto Pick, former Deputy Czech Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Director of the Institute of International Relations on "U.S. Foreign and Security Politics: Bush and Obama Compared;" Carol Dumaine, Director of Energy and Environmental Security at the U.S. Department of Energy on "Geostrategic Importance of Central Europe;" David Robson, Head of Energy and Environmental Foresight of the Scottish Government on "National and Global Security in a Volatile World: Shared Risks, Uncommon Challenges, New Opportunities" and Professor Richard Shultz from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University on "Armed Groups and Irregular Warfare: A Major 21st Century Security Challenge."

PSSI continues to seek to enrich its co-sponsored Master's Degree Program in International Security Studies at the Faculty of Social Sciences. The institute is presently working with Charles University for the launch of two new courses configured by PSSI – "Space Security in the 21st Century" and "Introduction to the Economic and Financial Threat Domain."

PSSI CONVENES ITS TENTH NATO SUMMER SCHOOL

For the tenth consecutive year, PSSI, together with NATO's Public Diplomacy Division, organized a summer school session entitled "NATO's Security Challenges" that was held on July 6-11, 2014 in Měříň, Czech Republic. Each year, our Summer School attracts some 25 highly qualified graduate level students from NATO member and partner countries to participate in a week-long seminar consisting of lectures, workshops, and presentations. About a dozen nations are generally represented.

Summer School students participated in lectures in the morning and interactive workshops and simulations in the afternoon. This prestigious gathering continued a tradition of attracting prominent security policy practitioners such as: General Petr Pavel, Chief of the General Staff, Czech Armed Forces; Keir Giles from Conflict Studies Research Centre, UK; Marcin Zaborowski, Director of the Polish Institute of International Affairs; Janis Kazocins, Adviser to the Minister of Defence and Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Latvia; Petr Luňák, Deputy Head of Outreach Countries Section at NATO Public Diplomacy Division; Jiří Schneider, Senior Fellow at the Prague Security Studies Institute; Petr Chalupický, Deputy Permanent Representative of the Czech Republic to NATO; Alexandr Vondra, Director of the Prague Centre for Transatlantic Relations at the CEVRO Institute in Prague; Pauli Järvenpää, Senior Research Fellow at the International Centre for Defence Studies; Major General (Ret.) Petr Pelz, PSSI's Executive Director and former Head of Czech Military Intelligence; Roger W. Robinson, Jr., President and CEO of RWR Advisory Group and Chairman and Co-founder of the Prague Security Studies Institute; and Benjamin Haddad, lecturer at Sciences Po in Paris.

PSSI INITIATES AN E-LEARNING PLATFORM

In response to the increasing demand for an innovative approach to learning and the institute's desire to broaden its outreach, PSSI has developed an e-learning platform that is available to individuals working on, or interested in, current and emerging issues in the field of foreign policy and international security. We hope to build a learning tool that is complimentary and reinforcing of our more traditional teaching methods. Recorded lectures are available on e-learning platform SlidesLive. PSSI is anxious to offer these interesting educational opportunities online so that they can be viewed at the convenience and leisure of the individual. A collateral benefit of this new vehicle, will be providing more content for PSSI's IRSEC Hub (International Relations and Security Affairs Resource Hub) which already connects 27 regional think tanks from Visegrad countries.

ENERGY SECURITY PROGRAM

INTENSIVE ENERGY SECURITY COURSE

The one-week intensive course is the flagship project of the broader Energy Security Program established at PSSI in the Fall of 2012, which includes a three-year joint educational initiative with Masaryk University in this critical field.

The aim of the course (to be renamed PSSI's Energy Security Academy) is to provide Czech and international students with an active interest in global energy affairs with an advanced understanding of this relatively new dimension of international security studies. The weaponization of Russian state-owned energy enterprises prior to, and during, the Moscow-sponsored Ukraine crisis has altered substantially the regional energy environment, particularly with respect to natural gas and nuclear energy.

In 2014, the course was entitled "Global and Regional Challenges to Czech Energy Security". This second annual course was held from February 10 to 14, at the American Centre in Prague.

Among the lecture topics were: the future of nuclear energy; unconventional energy sources and its development in Europe; and changes in the energy sectors of traditional energy producers. Admission to the course was highly selective and only fifteen students were chosen from a broad applicant pool based on their demonstrated previous experience and interest in the field.

Among the lecturers were Edward McGinnis, U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary, International Nuclear Policy and Cooperation, U.S. Department of Energy; Václav Bartuška, Czech Ambassador-at-Large for Energy Security; James Krane, Baker Institute, Rice University and Gawdat Bahgat, Center for Strategic Studies, National Defense University.

The intensive course was also the beneficiary of invaluable contributions from its partners at Masaryk University, specifically the team of lecturers from the Faculty of Social Science. Masaryk University is currently the only Czech university that provides a graduate degree program in energy security. The program launched its English language degree program in September 2014. PSSI plans to continue its partnership with Masaryk University as it expands its educational offerings.

SPECIAL PROJECTS

PSSI's Special Projects Program aims to identify and analyze relevant foreign policy and security-related issues that will increasingly affect and influence the transatlantic security policy community. These challenges involve considerably more than the traditional political-military agenda that dominated the previous century, as less visible and unconventional methods of conflict are gaining traction among the world's bad actors, including sophisticated cyber attacks, and so-called "hybrid warfare" with a sizable economic and financial dimensions. To meet these new challenges, PSSI developed a quick-response, Special Projects Program within the Institute, headed by the former First Deputy Foreign Minister of the Czech Republic, Jiří Schneider.

PSSI PROJECT: "SECURITY REFORM IN UKRAINE"

In 2014, PSSI launched a project supported by the Czech Ministry of Foreign Affairs' Transition Program. The key objective of the project was to identify major obstacles to reform, explore how to overcome these bottlenecks and help manage the successful consolidation of Ukraine's new security sector. In the first phase of the project, PSSI staff consulted local partners from state institutions, NGOs (e.g. Institute of World Policy), and other partner organizations about their needs for expertise and other skill-sets in the effort to assist the Ukrainian security community. The topics and themes connecting Ukrainian requirements to Czech experts and resources were identified, notably the central and local level challenges associated with sector reform.

The project was implemented by a PSSI Team, led by PSSI Senior Fellow Jiří Schneider. The team also included security experts from academia and NGOs. Czech diplomats and security advisors in Ukraine were involved in shaping the project.

In the second phase, PSSI, in cooperation with the Institute of World Policy in Kiev, organized a roundtable held on December 11, 2014. Its main focus was the institutional overhaul of the security sector with special attention to mechanisms for security clearances, capacity building in local policing, training as well as cooperation with local stakeholders; and a support structure for police work at a communal level, including restoration of public trust in the security forces. The meeting also helped to identify follow-up projects to be implemented by Czech experts and

Heidi Meyer, Political Advisor, NATO Allied Land Command Izmir, Turkey, with students of the Interagency Civilian-Military Training

NGOs together with contributions from other countries and the ongoing advisory and mentoring missions by the OSCE, the EU and NATO.

The project will continue in 2015 to further strengthen the resilience of civil society and the capabilities of NGOs in monitoring the security sector. Moreover the project will aim to prepare pilot projects in coordination with local police units and offer new ideas concerning increased transparency by practical application of such devices as the Freedom of Information Act in the U.S.

PSSI CO-ORGANIZED INTERAGENCY CIVILIAN-MILITARY TRAINING

In June 2014, the Czech Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Prague Security Studies Institute (PSSI) and Vyškov Military Academy organized a two-week training seminar for Czech civilian experts and those interested in participating in Czech reconstruction and observation missions abroad taking place within NATO, the EU, the OSCE or the UN. The training sessions were designed to respond to the urgent need for NATO and EU member states to increase the number of qualified and skilled civilians capable of taking part in complex stabilization projects, crisis management exercises and civilian-military operations around the world.

The first week of the course was held in Prague at the Diplomatic Academy of the Czech Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The latter half took place in Vyškov at the military training compound.

Speakers included, among others: Heidi Meyer, Political Advisor, NATO Allied Land Command Izmir, Turkey; Jaroslava Novotná, Chief Prosecutor, EULEX Kosovo; Sean Gralton, Senior Community Justice Advisor, USAID; David King, McKellar Corporation, USA; Sherrin Hill, Recruitment Officer, Department of Human Resources, OSCE; Petr Chalupecký, Deputy Head of Czech Delegation to NATO; Jan Plešinger, Deputy Head of Mission to Moldova, OSCE; Aleš Hanek, Hate Crime Officer, OSCE/ ODIHR; Veronika Kuchyňová-Šmigalová, Czech Ambassador, Special Envoy for the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP), MFA; Tomáš Kocián, People in Need; Steven Martin, Election Adviser, OSCE/ ODIHR.

SPACE SECURITY PROGRAM

PSSI is persuaded that the security and sustainability of the space environment is now essential to the day-to-day lives of Earth's inhabitants. Should access to, or the use of, space be compromised, particularly by the deliberate actions of certain space-faring nations, the possible harm done could be catastrophic. Accordingly, the Institute launched a program in 2010 dedicated solely to the space security portfolio, an underdeveloped dimension of the broader space domain.

A centerpiece of this program is a Biennial Space Security Conference Series, two of which had already been held, with leading space security experts and officials from Europe, the United States and Japan. The program will also embody an academic component in the form of a PSSI-structured course entitled "Space Security in the 21st Century" being taught under the auspices of Charles University's Master's Degree Program in International Security Studies (MISS). PSSI's Third Biennial Space Security Conference is currently scheduled to be convened in Prague in summer 2016.

ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL STATECRAFT PROGRAM

The national security dimensions of global economic and financial (E&F) relations in our highly interdependent world are arguably more prevalent than ever before. Sanctions are more common and varied, and so are the measures taken to circumvent them.

PSSI has long recognized this reality and now has a program dedicated to educating the security communities and militaries of allied nations as well as academia, industry and non-governmental organizations concerning the various modalities of E&F statecraft and warfare, particularly the strategic use by prospective adversaries of their forward-deployed state-owned enterprises.

PSSI often refers to this field as the Economic and Financial Threat Domain, which we believe will become increasingly integrated into the training, planning, readiness and operations of NATO and allied militaries more broadly. It is also a portfolio that is increasingly attractive to government policy-makers as a non-kinetic option for crisis prevention and resolution in a domain dominated by the West.

IRSEC Hub (International Relations and Security Affairs Resource Hub)

The Institute plans to launch a new course at Charles University's MISS program in the Fall of 2015. The course will likely be entitled, "Introduction to Economic and Financial Statecraft". It will be structured with the active assistance of PSSI and its first two outside lecturers will be PSSI principals, Roger Robinson and Andrew Davenport.

PSSI WASHINGTON

In the fall of 2006, the Prague Security Studies Institute Washington (PSSI Washington) was established in Washington, DC. Its mission is to strengthen U.S. understanding of the security challenges facing Central and Eastern Europe, and other post-communist states. PSSI Washington also seeks to enrich the public policy debate on both sides of the Atlantic with respect to the connectivity between transatlantic security issues and those confronting our allies in the Asia-Pacific region. It is also a leading resource in the expanding field of space security. PSSI Washington is committed to helping communicate, explain and predict official U.S. perceptions and policy options concerning key global flashpoints. It will continue to convene periodic, co-sponsored conferences and roundtables and fulfill its role as the first Czech non-governmental security policy organization to establish a presence in the United States.

SPECIAL EVENTS

PSSI'S NEW IRSEC HUB PLATFORM LAUNCHED

The IRSEC Hub, or International Relations and Security Affairs Resource Hub, launched in 2014, is a new online project created by the Prague Security Studies Institute. The main feature of this initiative is an information platform that aims at fostering more active, interconnected international relations and security affairs communities within all four Visegrad countries (V4). The principal goals of the IRSEC Hub project are to support enhanced cooperation and information exchanges within, and between, the V4 countries, to elevate the level of advanced public education in the region and to attract greater attention to regional projects, events and research underway in this vital portfolio. For more information, go to www.irsec-hub.org.

AWARENESS-BUILDING SESSION ON HAGUE CODE OF CONDUCT

On June 4, 2014 the Fondation pour la Recherche Stratégique and PSSI organized an awareness-building session on the Hague Code of Conduct.

This one-day seminar brought together a range of governmental, inter-governmental, industrial, and scientific experts to discuss current technology-control regimes and possible new approaches to support them. It also examined the implications of growing development of light-launcher technologies for ballistic-missile proliferation.

CLOSED ROUNDTABLE SESSION WITH MR. PESHKAWT ADHAM

On September 10, 2014, PSSI organized a closed roundtable with Mr. Peshkawt Adham, Iraqi Kurd based in Erbil. The roundtable addressed the future of Iraq and the threat of the so-called Islamic State, largely drawing on Mr. Adham's personal experience. In his lecture, Mr. Adham also talked about relations between the Kurdistan Regional Government and the central government and the impact of these relations on the current humanitarian crisis. He also addressed the threat currently faced by Iraqi minorities.

Previously Mr. Adham worked for several NGOs, including Czech NGO People in Need. Currently, he works for a local NGO al-Masella, helping Iraqi internally displaced people in Kurdistan Region of Iraq.

Dr. Amin Tarzi, Director of Middle East Studies at the U.S. Marine Corps University, talking to PSSI Alumni during the Alumni Guest Lecture.

FIRST ALUMNI GUEST LECTURE BY DR. AMIN TARZI

As a part of its Alumni Program, PSSI organized the first of a series of Alumni Guest Lectures in September 2014. The discussion was led by Dr. Amin Tarzi, Director of Middle East Studies at the U.S. Marine Corps University. Dr. Tarzi gave a presentation on the current drama in the Middle East and the prospect of further ISIS advances in Syria and Iraq.

Dr. Tarzi is a distinguished expert on the Middle East security policies and threat perceptions with focus on Egypt, Iran, Iraq and Israel. His prior experience includes holding the post of Political Advisor to the Saudi Arabian Mission to the United Nations dealing with the conflicts in Iraq, Afghanistan, the Balkans and Somalia; and the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty extension. Dr. Tarzi also frequently appears at BBC, CNN, Al-Jazeera, ABC News, CBS and his comments were published in numerous outlets, including The New York Times, U.S. News & World Report, The Christian Science Monitor, The Jerusalem Post, The National Journal, The Asia Times, The Associated Press, Forbes, and Defense News.

ROUNDTABLE ON RUSSIAN STATE-OWNED ENERGY ENTERPRISES' ACTIVITIES IN CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE

On November 26, 2014, PSSI together with the Masaryk University's Centre for Energy Studies, organized a closed roundtable on Russian state-owned energy enterprises' activities in Central and Eastern Europe. This event was a part of our three-year cooperation initiative with Masaryk University.

The roundtable gathered around twenty experts and energy industry representatives from the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Hungary and Ukraine. Speakers from the Masaryk University's Centre for Energy Studies presented the preliminary findings of a joint study underway on the operations and behavioral characteristics of key Russian energy companies in CEE countries, including Ukraine (i.e. Gazprom and Rosatom). They first addressed the impact of changes in EU policy environment concerning these companies, followed by select country-related case studies in the second part of the meeting. Both presentations catalyzed fruitful discussions among the participants.

PSSI Students

ALUMNI PROGRAM

PSSI's Alumni Program is designed to connect, support, acknowledge, and benefit the growing PSSI "extended family" and facilitate information exchanges among students and young professionals. Today, PSSI's "extended family" accounts for about 500 graduates from around the world.

Our students successfully completed one or more of PSSI educational initiatives: the Robinson-Martin Security Scholars Program; our co-sponsored Charles University's Master's Degree program in International Security Studies; NATO Summer School; our Interagency Civilian-Military Training Program or our intensive Energy Security course. Our Alumni project is primarily communicated and organized through social media platforms such as Facebook and LinkedIn, but we are also organizing a number of informal alumni events throughout the year to facilitate career-related exchanges and informal interactions between our present students and alumni.

STRUCTURE OF REVENUES

ABOUT PSSI

THE PRAGUE SECURITY STUDIES INSTITUTE (PSSI) is a non-profit, non-governmental organization established in early 2002 to advance the building of a just, secure, democratic, free market society in the Czech Republic and other post-communist states.

PSSI's mission is to build an ever-growing group of informed and security-minded policy practitioners dedicated to the development of democratic institutions and values in the Czech Republic and its regional neighbors. PSSI offers programs that meet the critical requirements associated with equipping new generations of young leaders to manage the complex, security-related challenges of the 21st century.

To fulfill its mission, PSSI conducts a broad range of activities under its Security Scholars Program; Special Projects Program; Space Security Program; Economic and Financial Statecraft Program and Energy Security Program. PSSI aims to identify and analyze select foreign policy and security-related developments in transatlantic relations and other theaters of the world, and to propose sound, achievable policy responses to these and other security concerns. Its foremost mission remains, however, preserving and expanding the hard-fought freedoms of the Czech Republic and those of other post-communist states.
